

The MONEY Charity

Our Work with Adults

Our work with adults is where it all began - we have over 20 years' experience of providing innovative and engaging products and services that help adults manage their money well.

We have worked with all sorts of groups, and produced training and advice for all sorts of people. Tailored initiatives have in the past included working with people in prisons, through churches, housing association residents, members of credit unions and staff of charities, and local councils. We believe that staying on top of your money really is for everybody.

Check out our website for articles with a wide range of advice and information written in easily digestible chunks. We provide a personalised search facility and categorise our articles, so we can still help even if you don't know what you need to know. Also on offer is our Budgetbuilder – the essential online tool for building a budget, our Spendometer an easy to use mobile app which will help you keep track of your expenditure on the go, and a Money Manual available to download and to order in printed form.

We like to get out and about and offer workshops to people face-to-face. We have two standard training packages which can be tailored to the demographics of the audience. Both are delivered in a relaxed and interactive format – making money matters interesting and nonthreatening. The shorter offering (around two hours) is for direct delivery to groups of up to 20 and covers: planning (budgeting), saving, debt, financial products and everyday money. The longer package (whole day) is to equip groups of no more than 16 to assist others to get on top of their money. It covers the same areas as the shorter course and assumes no prior knowledge from the participants. It is a great way to help your employees/volunteers get to grips with their own finances as well as giving them new skills to help your customers/service users.

Finally we can provide a consultancy service to help you develop your own financial education offering. Whether you are looking to develop online content or tools, face to face training or activities, or simply printed material to promote good money management, we are here to help.
